

Geneva Conference Ends Without Treaty

After Seven Weeks of Discussion Delegates From United States, Great Britain and Japan Are Unable to Reach Agreement on Limitation of Smaller Naval Craft—Gibson Denounces British Stand in Closing Speech.

GENEVA, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Tripartite Naval Conference came to an unsuccessful end today. After seven weeks of discussion, the delegates of the United States, Great Britain and Japan found themselves unable to reach an agreement on the limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines which was the object of the conference.

Gibson Makes Final Address. The end came after Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation, had made the final address of the session, the conference adopting a joint declaration adjoining the conference sine die.

The immediate adjournment came after a vote of thanks had been adopted by Mr. Gibson, the motion being made by W. C. Bridgeman, chief of the British delegation, and seconded by Admiral Viscount Ishihara of Japan.

Coolidge Invitation Clear. In his address, Mr. Gibson pointed out that the invitation to the conference by President Coolidge left room, for doubt as to the nature of the proposals the American delegation would make. Those proposals, he said, had conformed strictly to the spirit of the invitation and he believed that the Japanese had indicated willingness to negotiate on the basis of minimum figures suggested by the American delegation.

British Wanted More Cruisers. "From the first, however, we encountered a serious difficulty in the fact that the British Government had demanded considerably larger number of cruisers than we could possess," Mr. Gibson said.

British Position Not Clear. He added that while the British had been defended on the point of absolute naval needs of the empire, the American delegation had been able to reconcile the question of absolute naval needs with the negotiation of a treaty to fix limitations on the basis of mutual expansion program not needed.

Smaller Ships Unsatisfactory. Calling attention to the British position for strict limitation of the type of cruiser armed with six-inch guns and for limiting all other craft to six-inch guns, Mr. Gibson said the smaller ships would be of relatively small use to the United States for lack of cruising radius and protection.

Results of British Proposal. "The immediate and obvious result of acquiescing in these British proposals," he maintained, "would have been that the British Empire would have been able to build exactly what it desired and that we, on the other hand, would be restrained from building what we considered we might need, and yet the tonnage levels imposed by the British Empire would result in a substantial increase even at present strength."

A Last Minute Attempt. At last moment attempt was made by Great Britain today to rescue the situation from the wreckage of the tripartite Naval Conference when Mr. C. Bridgeman, chief British delegate, proposed an agreement to restrict to destroyers and submarines.

Produces Many Sensations. More sensations have been produced by the three-power naval conference than almost any international conference in history. The opinion of many observers is that the day it even exceeded dramatic qualities the historic peace conference at Genoa, when European leaders, failed in their efforts to bring Soviet Russia back to the comity of nations.

Recalls Lausanne Conference. The decision to adjourn the conference, theatrically timed at the hour of midnight, is compared with the dramatic collapse of the first Lausanne conference, when Lord Curzon suddenly took a train back to London, leaving Ismet Pasha,

Negro Found Shot to Death Late at Night

Jesse Dunn Is Found Dead With Bullet in Head at Goldrick's Landing—Troopers Arrest Negro For Possessing Ten Gallon Still—Held for Federal Grand Jury.

Jesse Dunn, a negro brickyard laborer, was found shot to death Wednesday night, lying in the rear of the house occupied by Guesstino Amisano, at Goldrick's Landing. According to Amisano's statement, between 10:30 and 11 o'clock Wednesday evening he heard a shot and he with another Italian went into the direction of the sound and found the negro dead. He was shot in the top of the head. Amisano also stated that he heard the noise of a person running away.

The statements were made to Sergeant James Cunningham, who with Troopers Baker, Coons and Martin and Deputy Sheriff Constable had gone to the scene of the shooting, after the sheriff's office had been notified. Coroner W. Norman Conner, who was also notified, went to the scene.

Obie Brooks, a negro, who lives in one of the buildings nearby and where the dead man ate his meals, stated to Sergeant Cunningham that Dunn had been at his house at 5 p. m. Wednesday, where he ate his supper. He said he had not seen him since. Brooks was awakened at 3 o'clock this morning and was brought by the troopers to the scene of the fatal shooting.

The Brooks home was searched. In the cellar a ten gallon still and some alleged alcohol were found, which were seized. A large revolver was also found.

Brooks was arrested and brought to this city and at 10 o'clock was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Arthur C. Connelly at his office in the Cordis building, Wall street, charged with possession of a ten gallon still without a government permit. He was held in $500 bail to await the action of the federal grand jury. Brooks was informed he must furnish bail during the day or be taken to New York and was then placed in the custody of Sheriff Rice.

100,000 EXPECTED AT

ROME CELEBRATION

Rome, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—More than 100,000 spectators are expected here Saturday for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the siege of Fort Stanwix and the battle of Oriskany.

The feature of the program is to be the staging of a pageant in ten scenes in front of a replica of the fort. The pageant was written by Josephine Wilhelm Wicks of Buffalo and is to be presented at Buffalo across a mile north of this city. One thousand actors are in the cast. An all-day program has been arranged as part of a state-wide recognition of the importance of the downfall of the Burgoyne campaign, a British defeat to which American victory at Fort Stanwix and Oriskany contributed largely.

SEVEN MILLION POUNDS OF

TOBACCO PURCHASED

A purchase which is considered a rare stroke has just been made by P. Lorillard Company—it was for approximately seven million pounds of the choicest and best old southern bright tobaccos, aged for three years. This large purchase will enable P. Lorillard Company to round out the production of fifteen billions of Old Gold Cigarettes. The tobacco was bought from the British-American Tobacco Company and indicates very friendly relations between these two companies.

Turkish minister delegate, stunned by a second gathering was held which resulted in a treaty between the European powers and in a special treaty between Turkey and the United States, which the Senate never ratified.

The question many persons were asking today was: "Will the Tripartite Naval Conference be brought to life again at future time, like the Lausanne conference?"

Washington Still Has Hopes. Washington, Aug. 4 (AP).—Hope of the Washington government that the efforts for further naval limitations which failed today at Geneva can be resumed at an early date, was indicated in a formal statement issued today by Secretary Kellogg.

Will Coolidge Be Out of Primaries? Rapid City Feels That Coolidge Is Out of 1928 Race

New Debatable Phase Added to Speculation of Political Leaders Growing Out of His Announcement on Tuesday—One Jurist Says He Will.

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP).—Whether President Coolidge would be eliminated from states having presidential primaries has added a new debatable phase to the speculation of political leaders and observers on the situation created by his announcement that he does not "choose" to run in 1928.

That the President's statement eliminates him from the primaries was the viewpoint of a Washington jurist, Associate Justice J. A. Van Orsdell, of the District of Columbia court of appeals, expressed in an address at Beatrice, Neb., Mr. Coolidge, by his announcement, would preclude himself from filing acceptance of nomination in such states, according to the jurist.

Curious interpretation of this angle, however, among congressional leaders here found little concurrence with Justice Orsdell's view, but it was expected that politicians today might devote some attention to the question.

Opinion on the interpretation of the President's pronouncement as to his political future continued today to remain divided. As a result of the varied views some leaders expressed the possibility that Mr. Coolidge would make a more definite statement about his wishes, at least privately. But others who have observed the President's deliberations were dubious that he will make any amplification at this time.

Byrd's New Flight Will Cost $250,000

Expedition to Be One of Most Stupendous Undertakings in History—Extensive Preparations to Be Made for Flight That Will Take About a Dozen Hours—Edsel Ford Will Not Be Sole Backer of Enterprise.

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—The New York Evening Post today says Commander Richard E. Byrd's scientific expedition into the Antarctic promises to be one of the most stupendous undertakings in history and will cost about a quarter of a million dollars.

This, Commander Byrd admitted, is an extraordinarily large sum, but declared it really a very conservative estimate, the distance the supplies will have to be transported and the fact that two, and perhaps three years, will be required for its completion.

Commander Byrd said that Edsel Ford will not be the sole backer of the expedition. He said conferences have been arranged with other men who have been interested in the expedition and who have expressed a desire to back it financially.

The commander declined to reveal the names of the projected backers. What is more important, he said, is the breadth of preparation that must be made before the flight to the South Pole, which, in itself, will not take more than a dozen hours or so. At the major base in Discovery Bay, a miniature modern city for thirty persons will be constructed.

Mrs. Bregman Buys Building

Mrs. Adele Bregman of this city has purchased the Mufson property at the corner of Broadway and Meadow street. The sale was made through Sam N. Mann, local real estate agent.

The brick building on this site was formerly used as a grocery store and residence by Mufson Brothers, who carried on a successful grocery business there for a great many years. Since the death of the Mufson Brothers, a few years ago, the building has not been occupied.

The new owner intends to open a delicatessen in the store space after extensive alterations and improvements have been made to the building.

CHARLES FLOYD'S CAR RAN

INTO DITCH WEDNESDAY

Wednesday evening a car driven by Charles Floyd of No. 14 Brown avenue left the road on the Boulevard at the Wallkill Valley railroad crossing and ran into a ditch. There is a steep grade at that point and Mr. Floyd stated that his car got into a rut in the road and he lost control. The car was not badly damaged and when gotten back on the road was able to proceed under its own power. Mr. Floyd and the three other occupants of the car escaped unhurt.

Got the Hotel Mixed.

In the program of the Sequel Centennial celebration in Kingston on September 10, received from official sources and printed in The Freeman, it was stated that a luncheon to visiting dignitaries would be given in the Governor Clinton Hotel. An official correction of the official error states that the luncheon is to be held in The Stuyvesant.

Rapid City Feels That Coolidge Is Out of 1928 Race

Believe That President Has Unquestionably Eliminated Himself from Occupancy of White House After March 4, 1929—Three Reasons Advanced for Such Belief.

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 4 (AP).—The opinion that President Coolidge's statement that he does not choose to run for president in 1928 might have more than one meaning dominated the belief had become almost positive that he has unquestionably eliminated himself from occupancy of the White House after March 4, 1929.

Could Only Use "Choose".

Several reasons for this belief come most prominently to the fore in Rapid City. First, it is pointed out, Mr. Coolidge could scarcely have used any other than the word "choose" in making his pronouncement and still keep the country from thinking him to be presumptive to the extent of believing the nomination next year actually was his. Had he said: "I will not run for President in 1928," he would have presumed, it is held, that the Republican convention would nominate him.

Other Phrases Also Confusing.

It is argued further at the summer capital that if Mr. Coolidge had said: "I will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1928," the same controversy would have arisen with the belief that the President was merely declaring himself not a candidate, but not that he would decline the nomination if forced upon him.

Cannot Enter Primaries.

Second it is declared by those in regular touch with the President that by his statement Mr. Coolidge closed the door to pledged delegates from some states which hold their primary election before the national convention. In those states it is necessary for an aspirant to certify himself in order to make a primary election result legal. It is held that if the President had any desire whatsoever to continue in the White House, he would not have gone out of his way to eliminate himself in these elections.

Likely to Refuse Nomination. Third, it is pointed out that the statement could in no way be construed as leaving the President in an easy position to go one way or another in the event the nomination was tendered him. It is held that in the final analysis, when the time came for him to accept or reject the nomination the choice would be up to him and since he already has made his choice not to run, that there was little reason to hold he would reach a different conclusion.

It is associated finally in the same quarters that Mr. Coolidge gained nothing politically by making the announcement because if he actually wanted another term his course would have been to remain silent as he did in 1924.

DOUBTS IF 33 MERCHANTS

SIGNED THE PETITION

One of the leading merchants of North Front street has written to The Freeman, stating: "I wish to clear up some misunderstanding as regards the petition to change the name of North Front street."

"It is stated that 33 merchants of North Front street signed this petition. I cannot agree with this statement as I don't really believe that there are 33 merchants on North Front street. I can enumerate off-hand over 10 to 15 merchants who have had stores for five years or more on North Front street who did not sign this petition and also 10 to 15 more persons who signed this petition and would like to revoke their signatures because they misunderstood the real nature of the petition. I hope that this will clear up the general impression that all the North Front street merchants want the name changed."

SAMUEL DEGROAT ARRESTED

ON COMPLAINT OF WIFE

Samuel DeGroat, 23 years old, of No. 49 Cedar street, was arrested Wednesday evening by the police on a warrant obtained by Mrs. DeGroat charging her husband with non-support. They have one child, a baby nineteen months old. DeGroat spent the night in the county jail as he was unable to obtain bail and this morning when arraigned before Judge A. H. Van Buren in police court the case was adjourned to Monday with the understanding that between now and the adjourned day DeGroat was to give his wife some money.

HEAD OF FIVE GENERATIONS

STILL HAIRY AND HEARTY

Warrensburg, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—Not many babies in this state can boast of having a great-great-grandfather, but such a distinction may truly be claimed by an Adirondack infant.

The lucky baby is a son born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Lloyd of this village. The proud great-great-grandfather is Truman C. Brown of the same village. The head of the five generations of the family is close to ninety-three years old and still hale and hearty.

Find Bodies in Kentucky Mine

Death Toll Mounts to Seven in Mine Where Explosion Occurred Wednesday—Nine Men Still Missing—Little Hope That They Are Alive.

Chattanooga, Aug. 4 (AP).—Three unidentified bodies were found early today by rescue workers in the Number 7 mine of the West Kentucky Coal Company, where an explosion occurred yesterday. The total number of bodies found was seven with nine men still missing.

Positive identification has been made of the bodies of James Meyers, George Cole, Mark Townsend and Arthur Shelton, all found yesterday. The three bodies discovered today were those of miners in the list of 12 men for whom the rescue workers are pushing their search.

Rescue workers were hampered in their progress as all the brattices of the pit shaft were destroyed in the explosion. They were forced to construct new brattices as they went down into the pit and had progressed as far as the eighth level. The missing men were believed to be on the tenth level where the explosion occurred. Little hope is held that they are alive.

The air in the mine was reported to be bad, and Byrd Sampson, a rescue worker, was overcome. He was brought to the surface and revived through first aid treatment.

The rescue workers include three crews provided with gas masks and these may be augmented by other men to press the work more rapidly should it be deemed practicable, said T. E. Jenkins, vice president of the West Kentucky Coal Company. Mr. Jenkins was in the mine with the workers.

State Legion Convention Opens

Annual Meeting Convened at Troy—Senator Copeland to Speak—Byrd, Bennett, Maitland and Tunney All Promise to Attend—Three Candidates for Commander.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—The state convention of the American Legion opened here today with an address of welcome by Mayor Harry E. Clinton and a response by Arthur E. Brundage, state commander. United States Senator Copeland was to speak this afternoon. Each of the delegates was given a key to the city, one side bearing the American Legion insignia, and the reverse having the coat of arms of the city.

There are three candidates for commander already in the field: James F. Gallivan of Rochester, Colonel William F. Scholte of Buffalo, and Michael F. Flynn of Long Island.

Assurances have been received from Commander Richard E. Byrd, North Pole and Atlantic Ocean flier, that he will be in Troy Saturday morning. Floyd Bennett, pilot of the ship which took Commander Byrd to the North Pole, and Lieutenant Maitland, who made the air trip from California to Honolulu, have also promised to come here, as has Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion of the world. One of the big features will be a parade tomorrow afternoon.

Los Angeles Has A Heavy Quake

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 (AP).—A heavy earthquake shook Los Angeles and suburbs at 4:22 a. m. today.

The tremor was sharp in downtown office buildings, being a double shake with about ten seconds time from start to finish. Santa Monica on the shore reported a similar one, the first tremor being a heavy thud, rolling off into a lesser vibration.

Pasadena and Hollywood felt the quake, newspapermen reporting being awakened. San Bernardino, 56 miles east of Los Angeles, also felt the double shake.

It was not felt in El Centro in Imperial valley, nor Santa Barbara, north of here on the coast. No damage was reported at any point.

FORMER GOVERNOR LOWDEN

RETURNS TO CHICAGO

Alexandria, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, prominently mentioned for the presidency in 1928, left his summer home, Castle Rest, here Wednesday afternoon for Chicago. Before departing by automobile for Chicago, where he was to take the 7:45 p. m. train, Mr. Lowden said he would return in a few days.

Shortly after President Coolidge issued his statement Tuesday that he did not choose to run for president in 1928, Mr. Lowden received a long distance call from Chicago. It was believed here that his trip might be for the purpose of conferring with the politicians who have supported his boom for the nomination.

Fuller Refuses Sacco-Vanzetti Clemency Plea

Massachusetts Governor Believes They Were Guilty and That They Had a Fair Trial—Hands Down 2,500 Word Decision—Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee Styles Verdict "Unbelievably Brutal"—Guard American Buildings and Officials All Over World.

Boston, Aug. 4 (AP).—Exactly one week from today Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti's seven year battle to escape death for murder will end in the electric chair at the Charlestown state prison unless their counsel can discover an angle of appeal to the Federal courts. That possibility is admittedly slender.

Governor Alvan T. Fuller in a momentous decision of 2,500 words last night closed their last hope of escape by appeal to the judicial or executive branches of the government of the Commonwealth by rejecting their plea for clemency.

Believes They Are Guilty.

He declared he believed with the jury which tried them in 1921 that they were the murderers of Frederick A. Parmenter, South Braintree paymaster, and Alessandro Berardelli, his guard.

Trial Was Fair.

He further asserted that their trial had been fair and just and that he saw no reason for granting them a rehearing. The condemned men whose claim to persecution as admitted radicals brought their case world-wide interest, will not know their fate until today.

They slept last night in the shadow of the chair and with faint hope that they would escape the death against which they have battled in one of the most dramatic episodes of Massachusetts justice.

Madeiros Also To Die. With them was Celestino Madeiros whose "confession" concerning a Providence, R. I., gang in the murder was rejected by Governor Fuller. He, too, will go to the chair next morning at expiration of the latest of a series of respite grants granted him in order that his testimony might be available in behalf of the other two.

Place Many Extra Guards.

While extra guards were thrown about the State House, the governor, about many of those who have been connected with the case, in anticipation of possible reprisals, counsel for all three condemned men worked frantically to seek new loopholes to stay their executions.

The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee which has directed the appeal in their behalf practically since the beginning of the case, has expended hundreds of thousands of dollars contributed by sympathizers in every quarter of the globe, declared it would fight until the last.

Decision Unbelievably Brutal.

It characterized the governor's decision as "unbelievably brutal," asserted that both the governor and his advisory committee must "justify themselves by reason and not by partisan bias," and appealed to the millions of people throughout the world who have supported them to come forward and join in this last desperate effort to stay the hand of the judicial hangman.

Thompson Withholds Comment. William G. Thompson, senior defense counsel, expressed regret but withheld detailed comment or an announcement of future plans until he had studied the governor's decision more fully. It was forecast, however, that an attempt might be made to interest a federal judge or possibly a member of the United States Supreme Court.

Insanity Plea for Madeiros. Edward M. Sullivan, attorney for Madeiros, was said to be considering a plea of insanity on behalf of the condemned man.

Governor Fuller was not present when, about 11:30 p. m. his secretary, Herman A. MacDonald, gave to newspapermen the typewritten sheets, which spelled doom for the internationally known radicals.

Fuller Silent.

The Chief Executive, plainly worn by the chief of the bank investigation and by the almost constant application in the past few days to the formulation of his decision, declined to be interviewed as he left the State House about 9 o'clock.

"I am very tired," he said. "I will have no further statement. The decision will speak for itself."

Crowds Receive News Quietly.

Crowds which had watched newspaper bulletins boards throughout the night for the announcement received the news with scarcely a murmur.

Murder Committed in 1920. The history of the long litigation started with the double murder on April 15, 1920. Less than a month later the two men, Sacco, a South Braintree shoe worker, and Vanzetti, a Plymouth fish peddler, who had

Kills Pesky Bed-Bugs Roaches and Ants

Doctors declare that bed-bugs, roaches and other vermin are the most to be feared means of spreading with disease as a result of their personal meetings and other contacts with humans. There is no danger in getting bed-bugs in your home, because they can't be caught. But it is a disgrace to permit them to remain and thrive when it is so easy to get rid of them with the few chemical compounds, P.D.Q., which quickly puts an end to these pesky devils.

A Million Bed-Bugs
A 3-cent package of this golden chemical will make a quart of mixture that is deadly to bed-bugs that it would kill a million of them if you could get that many together. Instantly it smother and annihilates the insects; coats their eggs and stops them from hatching and multiplying.

Will Not Damage Goods
P.D.Q. will not injure delicate fabrics, clothing, carpets, furniture, bedding, wall paper or woodwork. In fact, it is often used as a disinfectant and deodorant.

Moths
Impossible for moths to exist after using P.D.Q. Easy to use. A treatment on garments will prevent moths for two years.

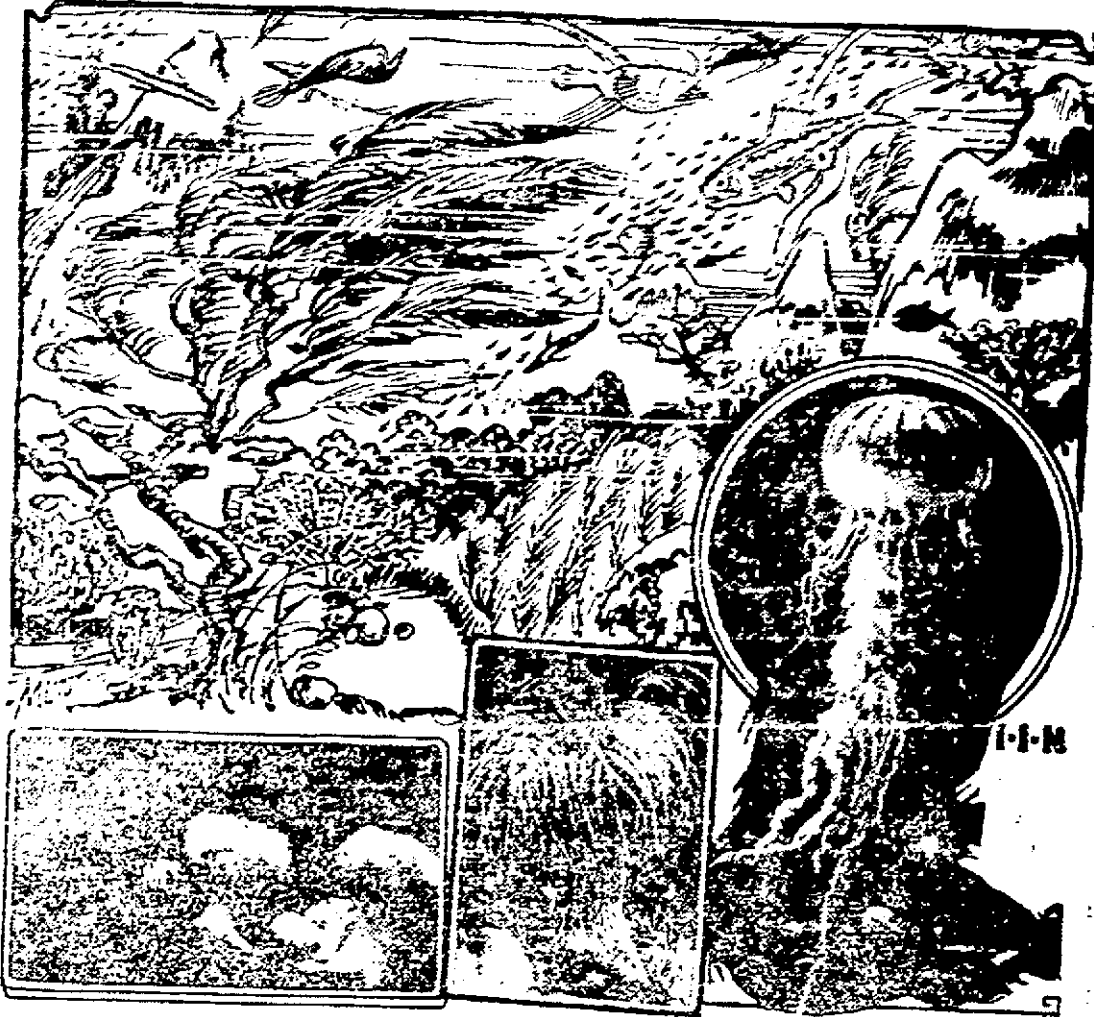

For Ants and Cockroaches
Ants and cockroaches stand no chance of surviving a treatment of P.D.Q. It attacks them and their eggs with such force that it kills their whole generation.

P. D. Q. In Liquid Form
P.D.Q. can be purchased in sealed bottles double strength liquid form, with patent spray free. P.D.Q. Liquid can be diluted to make a quart of it can be used free.

BEYOND THE KEN OF MORTAL MAN!

Most of the globe remains undiscovered. Vast areas below the level of the sea are unknown to man. Pictures of known wonders of underwater land suggest even stranger growths are to be found.

(International Illustrated News.)

Bottom of Sea Remains to Be Explored; But Fraction of Earth's Surface Known

Exploring is not a decadent profession. Thousands of men are making it their life work. From headquarters of a number of their national organizations Elmer Clark has obtained information for a series of four stories outlining the realms of the unexplored. This is the fourth.

By ELMER CLARK,
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK (I-I-N).—Exploring days over! Too much of the world already known! Not yet! Seven-eighths of the surface of the globe still challenge man to find their secrets. The South Polar regions are yet to be mapped; El Gran Chaco defies the penetration of white men; the Arabian desert keeps its secrets burning in the sun, but these areas are small compared to the area of the strangest of all the unexplored lands, the bottom of the sea!

Of the 196,940,700 square miles of the surface of the globe, 139,686,000 are covered by seas. Only a minute proportion has been explored. Hasty soundings have only covered a small part of this world under the sea.

Of more than three-fifths of the whole area of the oceans, or more than nearly half the area of the globe, the bottom lies from 12,000 to 18,000 feet beneath the surface. Those areas which lie beneath 18,000 feet are known as deeps. While these deeps occupy only a small percentage of the surface of the earth, their total area is about 9,600,000 square miles!

Fifty-seven of these deeps have been located; thirty-two occur in the Pacific, nineteen in the Atlantic and six in the Indian Ocean. One of which continues into the Atlantic. The greatest one is 145 miles southeast of Tokyo. It is 6.18 miles to the bottom.

There are undoubtedly more of these deeps. Charting the ocean has only just begun; there are parts over which ships have scarcely ever sailed.

OPPORTUNITY.

What an opportunity for exploration! As a matter of fact, several expeditions are exploring the sea methodically and carefully. The American government, aided by an instrument that uses sound to chart the depth of sea, is mapping vast under-ocean stretches. This machine sounds a bell at regular intervals, and records the seconds and hundredths of seconds it requires from the "echo" to be "bounced" back off the floor of the sea. Depth is calculated by the time elapsing. This requires only a small fraction of the time required for the old method of letting out sixty-pound weights at the end of piano wires. A ship may chart the under-sea topography as fast as it can steam over a given area.

Several other expeditions are exploring the plant and animal life of the miles below the surface. Coastal plant and animal life is fairly well known, but little is known of life in the depths.

STRANGE FISH.

That strange fish live there is to be surmised. Undersea upheavals have sent strange animals squirming to the surface, only to burst upon reaching the area of lesser pressure. These have been reconstructed and scientists, from a study of them, suppose the existence of whole series of fishes, flattened out by the intense pressure several feet down, living strange existences, feeding perhaps only on the sinking debris of animal life miles up.

Vegetable life at the deepest parts of the ocean is not supposed; it is constantly dark in the depths, the water is below the freezing point (but does not freeze because of the salinity), and the pressure is enormous.

But there are vast plateaus under the surface of the water on which vegetable life and animal life both flourish abundantly. The famed Sargasso Sea in the Atlantic has only been scratched, yet hundreds of new specimens of sea life have been discovered.

The under-sea is not, as many suppose, a sandy or muddy stretch from shore line to shore line. Instead, the topography is much like the land surface of the world.

There are mountain ranges, valleys, plateaus, cliffs, canyons and hills. There are no rivers, but there are currents that carve passages and pools that form lakes. And the sea has its forests of huge sea plants, its fields of seaweed and its barren hills and sterile depths. In some places the surface is sandy, in other places rocky; again muddy.

But when life below the sea is known there will still remain a great exploration work. Are there not conceivable coal beds below water? Ledges of gold? Rich iron ore? Mineral wealth far in excess of what is available on the land?

Undoubtedly. It remains to be discovered and brought to the shore. There's a job for an adventurer!

Company's Barn Becomes Church

General Barn on the High Road to become the home of the Immanuel Baptist Church—Alterations to be Made to Interior of structure.

The ancient barn of the New York and Cement Company on the High Road leading from Hasbrouck to the Poughkeepsie will shortly be transformed into a negro church community center. The barn has been vacant since the Newark and Cement Company closed its plant a number of years ago.

The church taking over the property is the Immanuel Baptist Church which has been meeting in a building on Lower Hasbrouck avenue. The organization under the leadership of the Rev. C. H. King, a Baptist preacher, who came up church work among the negroes of the city some time ago. The Rev. Mr. King has had the assistance of the Rev. Charles Smith and the congregation of the Wurts Street Baptist Church in their work among the negroes and the Wurts street church has placed at the disposal of the negro congregation on several occasions for the purpose of holding services for some of the members of the negro church.

Due to the growth of the work had been found necessary to seek quarters which finally led to decision to purchase the big cement company barn. Plans for altering the barn for church and community work are in the hands of an architect. The lower door will be used for church purposes—and the upper floor, formerly the hay loft, a community center.

One of the finest views in the city of the Hudson river may be obtained from the cement company barn, and property is ideally located for the purpose to which it will be used.

It is expected that church services will be held in the new location the first Sunday of this month.

Work of raising funds to cover cost of the purchase and the necessary alterations is now being carried on by a committee.

Jersey Is Smart for Sports Wear

Novel Color Combinations Conspicuous in Summer Frocks.

In the present of fashions each year some one type of dress is presented more distinctly than others. This year, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, sports clothes have attracted the greatest attention, and at the moment the most in style is the equipment for mid-summer sports. The design originally intended for dresses for athletic activities has come to be adapted for any and every occasion, and now the sports or semisports model is taken as a guide in the cut of the greater number of gowns shown in the summer collections.

One seeks an afternoon gown of crepe or chiffon and one is likely to be offered one made with a belted waist or a wide shawl collar. Or, in answer to the demand for evening dress, especially for one of simple form, there is apt to come a frock which if done in another fabric might be worn at a "sports" social affair. It is the model of the season, reflected in fashionable attire, illustrated with chic by the leading couturiers for their clientele and followed by the feminine public at large.

Smartest of all in the true sports clothes is the jersey suit. The charm of a dress, such as a one-piece suit or ensemble of jersey is in its comfort and in the fact that it answers for service in many ways. It is so unpretentious and, however sophisticated, apparently so simple that a woman who begins with one or two sports suits is intrigued to use the model for as many costumes as she requires.

The first models in jersey and knitted frocks were crude affairs, warranted to make a woman appear at her very worst. But style and workmanship have improved season after season, and the latest jersey and knitted things are delightful. The smartest designers at Paris have turned their respectful attention this season to sports clothes, including many frocks and suits of this soft and easy type. Jean Patou expressed his approval early in the summer in several original sports frocks, some of which have attracted attention at Biarritz among even the brilliant assortment of fashions displayed there.

Without repeating, several of Patou's sports frocks are made with the striped effect emphasized. A striking example has a blouse of striped jersey cloth in bordeaux red and beige and a plaited skirt of beige flannel. In this little suit the hat and stockings match the shade of beige in the fashion of the season with a band of red on the hat repeating the contrasting color of the jersey. Chanel has done two particularly attractive sports suits in jersey, one in flamingo red with graduated stripes of white in the jersey blouse and a skirt of plain red woolen, plaited all around. The other is all of jersey cloth in the soft green that is so tremendously fashionable, with stripes of lighter green, woven in the border around the bottom of both blouse and skirt and on the collar and cuffs.

Jersey and knitted frocks are usually thought of as being of wool, and these are the clothes suitable for tennis, for the beach and mountain resorts and for ocean travel. But most lovely things designed for mid-summer to be worn in the open are of silk, knitted, crocheted, or in woven jersey. This is the sort of frock or suit one sees at watering places, at country houses and clubs, the type of dress to be worn in the gallery at tennis, polo, the races and for all the less strenuous affairs in the country.

Some designers are using knitted frocks, sweaters and jackets of wool and silk, which is a practical solution of the demand for dresses that are less warm than all wool, and a bit more dressy in appearance. Lachin has introduced an interesting variant of the knitted sports suit in a sweater-like model of dark-colored knitted jersey. The body of the sweater-blouse is woven with a large diamond-shaped pattern, with plain sleeves and a band of the plain goods around the bottom and at the neck. The popular plaited model is used for the skirt in plain knitted.

A swaggy sports ensemble using stripes conspicuously, introducing vivid colors in this manner is being used by Lucien Lelong. This has a kimono-like knitted jersey in dark beige with two stripes of jade green at the top of the skirt hem, and wider stripes of green forming a girdle line.

around the bottom of the blouse. A short loose jacket is all in beige, with but a touch of green on the small side pockets and at the wrists.

Sleeveless Models Modish. The sleeveless frock or sleeveless sweater is very modish, and in most of the sports costumes a blazer or reefer is made to be slipped over it. Martial et Armand's contribution to the sports vogue includes a sleeveless jumper of brown tucked crepe, to be worn with a skirt of brown and tan plaid kasha. A jacket that is cut to cover the hips and to fasten well up around the throat is made of kasha in the shade of the blouse.

The sports idea in a lighter type of dress is presented in many models that are suitable for almost any daytime affair in the country and for informal occasions in town. At almost any fashionable social function many wear the softer, more elaborate sort of summer costume—the flowery printed chiffons, volles and crepes in all the enchanting shades. But it is quite correct to wear a sports dress of the finer sort, especially when it is made of a supple or sheer material.

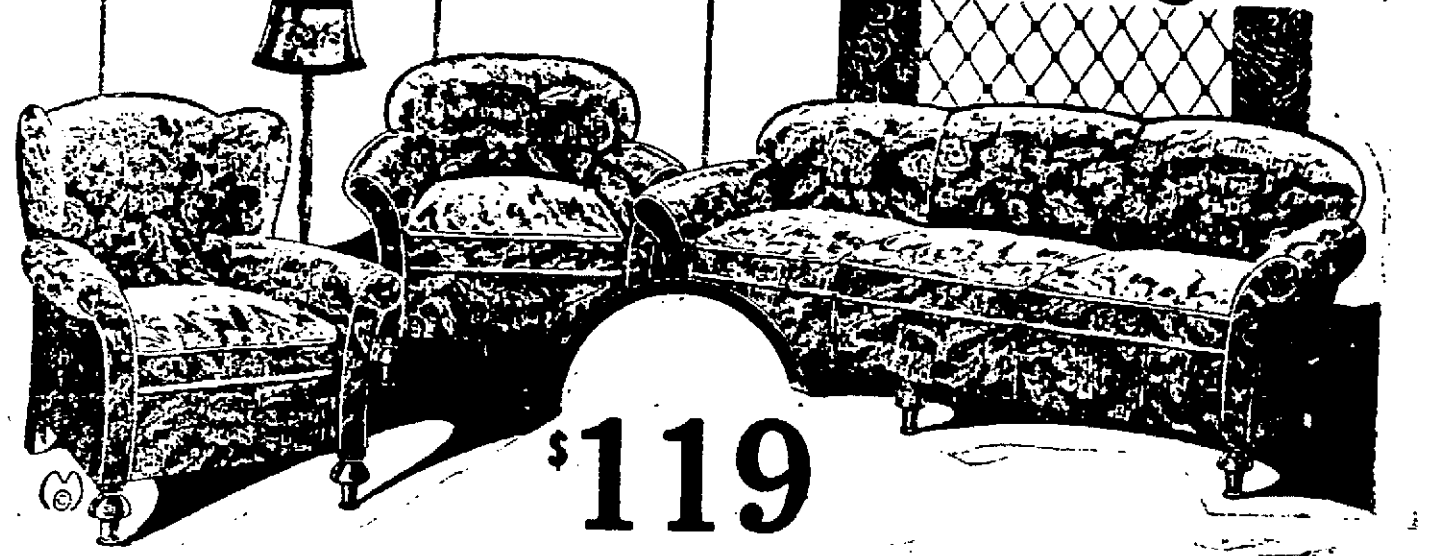

The scarf has become so important a part of the costume that it is no longer considered as merely an accessory. With the vogue of printed chiffon for every type of dress, from dance frock to sports, the most filmy scarfs are shown. They are made of the most elusive sheer stuffs and the most enchanting of colors, in every shade down to the faintest pastel and flower tints. Ombre colors are especially charming in scarfs to be worn with tulle and chiffon dance frocks. Some elaborate French scarfs are made of net, embroidered in graceful designs with gilt and silver thread. The dyed-lace scarfs are pretty and very popular. Scarfs of plain or printed crepe-de-chine are smart for daytime and sports wear. These are done in bold modernistic and cubist patterns, in weird colors, usually printed on a white or light background. A striking novelty is a practical muffler of white, light beige or gray cashmere, fringed at the ends. Also each end is hand painted in a sophisticated motif—scenes with figures of animals. The Deauville scarf is again being worn.

New Black Evening Gown. Quite an amusing black crepe satin evening gown was provided by Philippe et Gaston, with a dicker fore and art to fill in, if desired, its cut-out neck line. The U-shaped dickers were attached to a straight collar banded with an inch-wide embroidery of pearls. With this collar fastened about the neck, the U-shaped pieces fell in front and back, entirely concealing the formal purpose of the gown, since in other respects it could quite reasonably be termed an afternoon gown, having a two-tiered skirt draped to the left with fabric ends hanging. The band of pearl embroidery appeared inconspicuously about the belt line and was attached to the foundation skirt under the outline of the upper tier, falling thence down the side under the hanging draped ends of the skirt. The waist was quite plain and sleeveless, cut cut in U's both front and back.

Bird Has Multiplied

The English sparrow was brought to the United States from England in 1850 by Nicholas Pike and other directors of the Brooklyn Institute, when eight pairs were liberated in Brooklyn, N. Y. The motive was to free the shade trees of devastating caterpillars, which at that time were especially numerous and annoying throughout the eastern states.

Doing His Best

Whenever I have found out that I have blundered, or that my work has been imperfect, and when I have been contemptuously criticized, and even when I have been overpraised, so that I have felt mortified, it has been my greatest comfort to say hundreds of times to myself that "I have worked as hard and as well as I could, and no man can do more than this."—Darwin.

Properties of Horse's Eye

The biological survey says that the crystalline lens varies somewhat in the eyes of different mammals. Magnification of the object may sometimes result, but it is impossible to tell the comparative impression on the retina and the optic nerve. Should man appear three times his normal size to a horse, all other objects would also be magnified three times.

Man and the Book

Now that they are firing Biblical questions at everybody it is noticed that the average man knows that Daniel was in the lion's den and Noah built the ark. Beyond that he may wobble a bit. Yet the Bible is always the volume of greatest circulation and widest annual placement. It is still the world's best literature.—Los Angeles Times.

THE 53 AND ONE.

If anyone doubts that the silly season is at its height he has only to contemplate the petition signed by 53 persons who want the name of North Front street changed to banal and commonplace Market street. If doubt still remains that the season is at its height, reflect for a moment on the alleged reasons given in support of the petition. One of them is that other cities have a Market street and therefore Kingston must have one. Most other cities also have a Congress street and a State street. Every New England village that has as many as three streets has a Congress street and a State street. Kingston has managed to exist for the 150 years since there has been a congress and a state without naming a street for either and as both congress and state have managed to totter along without this honor conferred on them by Kingston no special injury seems to have been wrought. But according to the immortal 53 Kingston's future is in dire peril unless it immediately has a Market street, because most other cities have a Market street.

Then North Front is not a proper name because such streets usually front on the water. What's the matter with the Esopus creek, if water is a requirement? Has the Esopus water turned to hooch? The fact is that North Front street is as truly the north front of the up-town business district as it was more than 250 years ago when it received its name because of the fact that it ran along the north front of the palisaded village. The present name is accurately descriptive, means something tangible and is not an apellike imitation of some other town.

If, however, North Front is not a pleasing or logical name why not adopt something at least equally good? There is a plentiful list to select from for each of which profound reasons may be advanced. For instance, the street runs along the edge of a ridge, so why not Ridge street? In the past there have been many fires along the street, resulting in rebuilding, so why not be real classical and highbrow and name it Phenix street? From the street, or at least from the roofs and rear windows there are beautiful views, leading to the very logical conclusion that it might be named Buena Vista avenue. As it links the Albany-New York highway with the beautiful Ashokan boulevard and the Ellenville road why not recognize this fact and name it Link street? Finally, why not introduce a tinge of religion in the naming and christen it Evolution avenue, seeing that it begins at the Senate House, priceless relic of the past dear dead days when there was no plumbing, and ends at an up to date baseball grounds and amusement park?

Any of these suggestions would be as appropriate as the naming some years ago of the Rosendale Road. The Boulevard after Albany avenue had indignantly rejected the offer of that entrancing title.

It is encouraging to know that one firm on North Front street did not sign a petition to have something done that in addition to its silliness would cost every business man on the street many dollars spent with sign painters and printers to partially establish the fact that he is still in business at the old stand.

FISHING ETHICS.

What is the right way to catch fish? Since this momentous issue was raised by President Coolidge's practical Vermont procedure in the Black Hills, there has been about as much discussion of fishing bait and methods as of disarmament and peace—which is probably reasonable enough, when you consider the season.

Here is what seems to be the final word on the subject, from an expert—Frederick B. Shaw, former international fly-fishing champion, instructor and writer on the noble art of fishing:

The object of fishing is to catch fish. The lures we use and the methods we employ may vary from the carefully bent pin and the wriggling worm of our childhood days to the $100 three-ounce rod and the delicate artificial imitations of the expert, but to each devotee of this fascinating sport only one term can be applied—"devotion". In trout fishing the lure may be presented to the fish below or upon the surface of the stream, may be either a natural bait, such as a worm, or an artificial imitation. Is this carrying criticism of the fishing experiences of President Coolidge deserved? As a matter of fact, the great majority, if not all, of the fishermen in the Black Hills district of South Dakota, angle with a snake lure.

We're driven to admit that since every fisherman is practicing deceit, and if it's merely a question of degree in guilt, there isn't much either left to argue about. The low-down on fishing seems to be that it's a low-down sport, anyway, and the low-down we are about it, the better fishermen we are. Some nature-interpreter ought to tell us what the fishes think of it.

Referring to the announcement that Edsel Ford has ordered an old-fashioned surrey, the New York World says: "The carriage maker from whom he ordered it lets it be known that the demand for such vehicles is much more brisk than has been commonly supposed. Despite the increase in automobiles, he says, more and more people are buying horse carriages of all sorts. And this should certainly cause no surprise. The automobile is no longer a novelty, and many of us are excessively weary of it. We may have to use it a large part of the time, but where opportunity presents we would gladly drive around in a buggy instead." But are there any off-roads left where crowding motor-cars will not drive a horse-carriage into the ditch? The World suggests the building of horse roads from which the automobile would be barred.

Increased divorce in America followed by "serial marriages" is characterized by Dr. Stetson of Trinity Church, New York, as "Progressive polygamy" which he regards as "more menacing to society" than the legalized polygamy of the East, the latter at least not leaving childhood without a home, which is more than can be said of the offspring of "serial marriages." In this connection the startling assertion is made that one in every six American marriages ends in divorce.

ENEMIES WITHIN THE BODY.

In war times there are troops known as shock troops. Their job is to do the hard things. In attack they frequently storm the enemy's cities, forts, and are supposed to take them or die in the attempt.

Someone has been likening the serious diseases of past years, the plague, typhoid fever, small pox, diphtheria, cholera, and the like, to these shock troops, and we have been able to throw them back because in civilized countries these diseases are now all under control. However these enemies of the body are from without. There are enemies from within which have not been put under control as yet, and their warfare, though not so fierce as the shock troops mentioned above, are serious, as they are in the body all the time, lying in wait as it were, to do damage.

These enemies are the organisms that develop in the intestine due to constipation. They are in bad teeth and infected gums. In the sinuses and joining the nose. In tonsils that have ceased to be filters, and are now actually full of these small organisms.

Notwithstanding their presence in the body you go about your daily work in fair health. In time these organisms so multiply in numbers that you find yourself tired more than usual.

A little later you begin to have some pain somewhere in the body, usually in the joints, but often in the muscles or even the nerves.

What should be done? Don't wait until these enemies within get a real start, but see your family doctor once a year and let him overhaul you, and see your dentist twice a year for an examination of teeth and gums.

These troops in a sense are worse than the shock troops of typhoid, cholera, and so forth, because they do their work stealthily and thus much damage is done before you realize it.

Frame Houses Lost

Engineers of the Lumber Manufacturers' association in a recent survey found that the average life of a house is about 100 years, although individual dwellings may last considerably longer. After a century structural depreciation occurs sufficient to make a house unfit for further use. Well-built frame houses depreciate in value only a little more than those of brick or stone.

Mr. and Mrs. Seagull didn't really know what to do.

They loved their house, which was in a big harbor, for they enjoyed seeing the boats pass and hearing the different whistles.

All kinds of boats passed—ferry-boats, sailboats, old fishing boats, great big boats that went across the ocean, and little tugboats.

The seagulls would fly overhead, and then they'd land on top of the water, but they never could stay there long, as the boats would come along, and they would have to fly off.

Of late Mr. and Mrs. Seagull, although they were still as fond of their home as ever, became rather worried, for the little seagulls didn't seem to be able to get out of the way of the boats as quickly as the old seagulls could.

Mr. and Mrs. Seagull were afraid...

One morning, the little seagulls were quite certain that nothing like that would ever happen, but one day it did.

They were playing tag on the surface of the water, and so interested

A Great Boat Was Coming.

In their game that they didn't notice until too late that a great boat was coming along.

The captain of the boat had blown the whistle to scare the seagulls away. They hadn't heard it at all, so busy were they playing, and it hit poor little Bluey Seagull.

One of the others called out: "Oh, fly up quickly, Bluey!"

He was not badly hit, for the pilot of the boat had seen the seagulls and made the boat slow down.

Bluey was frightened almost out of his wits, but with the encouragement of the other seagulls he managed to fly off.

When Mr. and Mrs. Seagull saw what had happened to Bluey they were horrified and quickly flew off with him, all the other little seagulls following.

They flew as far from the boats as they could, for now that Bluey had been hit, they didn't think life in the harbor where the boats passed was so attractive.

In fact, they decided they would never go back there again.

They flew so far that they reached a little cove at the basin of the harbor, and when Mr. Seagull saw it he said:

"This will be our new home."

Mrs. Seagull said:

"We will never leave this home until all our little seagulls are grown up, for then they will always be safe and can play all they want to without being afraid of getting hit by the big boats."

So it was decided, and the cove was named Bluey Cove because it had been on Bluey's account that they had moved there.

And of all the seagulls he was the happiest and the most relieved.

But all of them were very much pleased with Bluey Cove.

A Riddle in Rhyme

My first is an animal wild, that once seen in a country where grow many trees; it is thought by the farmer to be his foe.

A very fine fur does this animal grow.

My second a lady does wear in the street.

If she is stylishly dressed and neat; And the men and women wear it also if the weather is cold and there is frost and snow.

My two joined together a fower will be;

It grows in a country surrounded by trees.

From it a powerful drug is taken; If you don't solve this I'm much mistaken.

Answer—Foxglove.

Wanted to See Him Unfold

The car was parked at the curb with the boy friend's 6 foot 6 inch brother tucked under the wheel. Little Toddy stood gazing in rapturous astonishment at the seemingly never-ending length of him. Her expression assumed me.

"What's the matter, Toddy?"

With her eyes still staring, she stage-whispered: "I'm waiting for him to unfold."

SCARFS, SHAWLS, AND CAPES
CONTINUE TO MAKE PICTURESQUE ADDITIONS TO THE SUMMER GIRLS' WARDROBE

New York.—Although the animal scarf held undisputed sway for spring wear, with warmer weather women are glad to lay even their beautiful silver and cross force away and to go back to their old love—the silk scarf.

There are several new ways of wearing the scarf, some of them admittedly trying to the short, thick-necked woman. To her it invariably seems that fashions were designed all ways for the divinely tall and divinely slender. She is forced to admit that scarfs knotted as shown in the accompanying sketch, or necklaces of the choker type, are not for her.

The casually knotted bandanna, the darling of Paris, is enjoying another season. As often of plaid, checked, or striped silk as it is in figured fabric, it has a new and pleasing way of repeating the fabric design of the skirt. The long scarf must play second fiddle to the kerchief type, which this season is highly decorative and often in hand-blocked or hand-painted design, with motifs of current interest, daring in color and execution.

The sleeveless sweater in the manner of Patou seems to call for a bandanna, worn knotted either on the shoulder or directly at the back.

Shawls continue to be worn for evening. There are also many capes of interest, including the wide circular Spanish cape, one end of which may be thrown over the shoulder. These are often collared in fur—white or dyed for usually—and some have a collarless line finished with a heavy cord and tassels.

New Paris Styles Smartly Feminine

Mode Also as Masculine as Any Woman Could Wish, Writer Says.

The emboldened stylist, writes a fashion correspondent in the London Times, has returned from Paris, smart and almost comatose. From London and Nice, from Vienna and Madrid, from New York, they had come to view the Paris summer showings, known generally as the salon or défilé, but actually professional pre-fall exhibitions. Faintly taking and enthusiastically they view the work of every salon, from the majestic Lanvin and Patou, down to the insignificant French dressmakers who are outside the pale of the Grand Couture. And after they had drunk in every last detail they came away, bewildered, confused and knowing less about the mode than before they fared forth. Some profess to see indications of longer skirts, an abatement of masculine imitation and a return to gentler styles; others are as certain that the mannish mode has not yet reached its peak, that it still dominates the mode and will continue to do so until the day the bifurcates shall be milady's uniform of the day. But the vast majority of the array of observers are frankly confused, uncertain of the feeble caprices of fashion and unable to say which way lies chic.

In their bewilderment they are not greatly different from the emigrants of the haute couture. These gentle folk have suddenly acquired a blandly effective way of saying nothing. What adds to the confusion is the fact that their creations have also achieved the doubtful talent of straddling every issue. So tremendous, apparently, is the urge to please that each Paris couturier must include in his collection every possible trend of fashion. The burden of making the mode, once the proud task of the haute couture, has slipped to the graceful shoulders of milady—once the humblest of subjects. And if you carefully analyze her reactions you may know which way blow the winds of fashion.

The Coiffure. There is perhaps no better reflector of the mood of fashion than the coiffure. For obvious enough reasons, the bob has been emblazoned over the model realms as the emblem of modernism. Starting as a gesture toward practicality, it has run merrily along, each season clipping off another lock. It paused only when it had exactly imitated the hirsute glories of the masculine sex—an effect anything but delightful except on the merest handful of women. That millennium was reached a year ago. Since then a slow but perceptible reaction has set in against the too-boyish aspects of the bob.

Conceding, then, that the coiffure is treading more feminine paths, what of the general details of fashion? Are they becoming simpler and more severe, or are they slowly adding that complexity which was once identified with the art of the mode? A brief perusal of the recent showing proves a quick answer to that question. In the first place, the straight silhouette has been outshone by a turn of the flare, which, in its revived form, is part of the broken silhouette. The waistline, steadily rising, is always becoming more marked. It is now made doubly convincing through the general tendency toward front fullness. This is often achieved through apron tunics attractively finished off with flounces; it is arrived at as well by tiers and new plaiting methods. On coats it often takes the form of side drapes and cascade fronts.

Drug, Straight Back. Yet, from the back the silhouette still appears as severe as ever. Indeed, the present fascination of the song, straight back is not easily ex-placable. Perhaps it is a reaction against the hoops and bustles of another generation. Or it may be just another phase of modernism. At any rate, it is a pertinent factor in current fashions—it has almost been a trend of fashion. Simple, severe, it offers a unique contrast to the other side of the silhouette. It becomes evident that the age-intra-model struggle has become so keen that now both factions meet in a single model—and unobtrusively express their actively opposite ideals.

Five years ago the exploitation of two such opposite themes in a single model would have been chided out of existence. There were then emphatic ideas on harmony in dress, harmony in colors, harmony in ensembles. It may be that the first forerunner of the clashing theme (ideal was the high neck, high hemline combination. The high neckline, for all its comparative modesty, was, and is, an extremely masculine touch—it was, perhaps, the first effort of the younger demiselles to identify themselves with the mannish mode. The knee-length hemline, on the other hand, belongs in the other category, yet the two have traveled along these several years in a tolerably companionable manner. Now the success of their liaison has directed the couturiers toward a new combination.

For the moment these opposite forces have arrived at a compromise—fairly happy in the light of what has gone before. The new mode, viewed as you approach it, presents a smartly feminine aspect. Observe it from the other side and it becomes as masculine as any post-warrior woman could wish. Thus you will observe that even fashion has its several sides, and to be smart this season you will have to present them both—partially. For once Paris sanctions a compromise, and chic this summer will be a definitely two-sided matter—one side feminine and furbelowed, the other mannishly severe.

Divided Into Two Types.

Broadly classified, the Paris mid-season collections are divided into two types—those which merely augment the February collections and those which show models for either late summer, early autumn or both. Molyneux, for example, features summer models for the Parisian clientele, among which he shows frocks in men's striped silk shirtings in pastel tones. His sports types are generally made to emphasize the hip line and front flare by extending the bodice in peplum effect and then adding tucks grouped in pairs above and below the belt or only above or only below. Fancy wool jumpers sometimes accompany plain-fabric skirts. Turn-over collars and buttons straight up the front, no sleeves, cap sleeves and long sleeves with open cuffs fastened like a man's are all features in the sports jumper of the Molyneux collection unless that jumper is strictly the pull-over type. Coat-frock types are shown as well.

On the whole, gray is one of the featured colors throughout all the midseason collections. Beige in all its variations is pronounced, and there are many soft brown tones, black, of course, and rose tints. Green is favored by a number of houses. Elspeth Champcommunal, for example, shows it straight through, from sports types to her simple, tailored evening gowns. Blues are not nearly so strong; in fact, some couturiers have practically abandoned them.

Coat models look further ahead, perhaps closer to early winter than any other garment. Fur trims practically every type of coat, but not quite as substantially as heretofore. Pieces are applied in various interesting ways according to the designer, while there is a general tendency to use cartridge-worked fur, and another consistent idea is to make coats with broad box plaits at the side, which might also be termed modified godets that are stiffened, for they reach well over the hip.

First Michigan Settlement
Sault Ste. Marie, settled by Father Marquette in 1668, was the first permanent settlement. The second was Mackinac, also settled by him, in 1671. Detroit was the third, being settled in 1701 by Cadillac.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1927, Western Newspaper Union)
One ship goes east and another west.
While the self-same breeze blows,
It's the set of the sails and not the gale
That bids them where to go.
Like the winds of the air are the ways of the fates
As we journey along through life.
It's the set of the soul that decides the goal
And not the storms or the strife.

EVERYDAY FOODS

When the warm days come, leaving one languid, get out for a brisk walk, filling the lungs with good fresh air, cut down on the protein foods, and eat plentifully of fruits and green vegetables. That tired feeling is nature's way of telling us that our blood is clogged with too much waste, which it is unable to dispose of. House cleaning should begin on and in the body. Stop stoking the furnace and clean out the ashes.

Brown Nut Bread.—Take two cups of graham flour, one cup of wheat flour, one-half cup of molasses, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of raisins, one and one-half cups of walnut meats; mix well and bake in a moderate oven.

Scalloped Fish.—Pick any leftover cooked fish into bits, carefully removing all bones. Take a pint of milk, add a slice of onion, a sprig of parsley minced fine, two tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk, salt and pepper to taste. Cook all together until smooth and well cooked.

Lucullus Sauce.—Beat one-half cupful of heavy cream until stiff, add three tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing, two tablespoonfuls each of horseradish (grated), vinegar, one teaspoonful of made mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a bit of cayenne.

Tomato Salad.—If the tomatoes are large, cut into thick slices; if small, cut into halves. On each slice or half, heap a teaspoonful each of celery and cucumber; cut into fine pieces; add a bit of minced onion and top with a spoonful of thick mayonnaise. Dash over the top a sprinkling of paprika and serve.

Auto Association Asks Wider Roads

Automobile Association Recommends Main Trunk Lines Be Built to Minimum Width of 40 Feet with 24-Foot Pavement.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The New York State Automobile Association has recommended to the Highway Department of the state of New York that in the future all main trunk lines be built to a minimum width of 40 feet, at least 24 feet of which shall be paved with a hard surface material.

The association does not recommend any special material, it being the attitude of the motorists' organization that the selection of a specific material should depend upon the judgment of the Highway Department.

The president of the New York State Automobile Association, H. A. McGraw, of Buffalo, states that the width of trunk line highways is going to be one of the most important factors of the future.

With upwards of two million motor vehicles being licensed this year the automobile has reached a state where it is of vast public importance. Today, it is not alone necessary to provide highways to take care of the traffic, but the safety of both riders and pedestrians must also be seriously considered.

Another important consideration is that of speed. It is generally agreed that on main trunk lines, slow moving traffic must not be permitted to hold up traffic which may desire to travel at a faster rate of speed, as this merely results in congestion and is frequently the cause of automobile accidents.

Longevity of Robins
The biological survey says that as far as is known robins live about ten or twelve years. Such birds have not been studied closely except those in captivity, but with the banding of birds that is now being done, it is hoped that much valuable data will be secured.

Kennedy Becomes Local Reo Agent

Proprietor of Central Garage Again Takes Over Reo Agency Which He Conducted for 18 Years Until Consolidation of Districts Two Years Ago.

O. M. Kennedy, proprietor of the Central Garage, Broadway at St. James street, has again been appointed the local agent for the Reo motor cars and trucks and now has a line of display cars on the show room floors. Mr. Kennedy is one of the pioneer automobile agents in the city, having previously been agent for the Reo cars for 18 years. Two years ago the local territory was consolidated with Middletown and Newburgh and the agency went to the Orange-Ulster Reo Corporation which later became the Ulster County Reo Corporation, in this city. After two years out of the Reo business, Sales Manager Strong has again sought the Kennedy Garage to handle the line which now includes both the Reo Flying Cloud car, the smaller Wolverine car and the well-known Reo trucks. Mr. Kennedy took over the agency on August 1 and will hereafter sell and service the line as he had done for 18 years. The two-line now includes both the medium and the higher price line of cars, all sizes. The Wolverine, a smaller car than the Flying Cloud, sells at as low as $1,195 and the big Reo Flying Cloud completes the price class at $1,995. In the passenger car line there are three body styles in the Wolverine line and seven in the Flying Cloud line. The truck line runs from one-half ton to three tons and comes in 11 styles and sizes including two bus chassis and the price class includes everything from $895 to $2,560. At present the complete Reo line includes 21 models in all.

Central Garage will sell and service the two line and Mr. Kennedy by reason of his long experience with the Reo line is amply able to give service. His mechanics after many years on the line have become experts on the cars. All cars of the Reo line are now made on the six-cylinder chassis and include four-wheel hydraulic brakes. Mr. Kennedy was one of the first automobile dealers in the city of Kingston and has been selling cars ever since. During the many years in business he has made many friends and sold many cars. All of his old customers as well as new ones will be welcome at the garage at any time to look over the present line of Reo cars or to obtain Reo service.

GIANT LOBSTER CAPTURED OFF LONG ISLAND COAST

Monster's Size Is Recorded as 28 by 48 Inches and Gross Tonnage Priced at 24 1/2 Pounds.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The horrors that might have happened along the coast this summer are beyond words. Stop and think, citizens, of what might have occurred had that lobster gone "way ashore" at Long Beach as he no doubt intended. Or if he had changed his course and put in at Rockaway or come down to Coney Island.

Of course you don't know what we are talking about. But we were so situated at considering the possibilities in that lobster we forgot all about telling you. Here's the idea: They caught a lobster the other day off Long Beach and the thing weighed 24 1/2 pounds.

So now you see! Gosh, suppose that beast, or whatever it is you call a lobster, had gone ashore and attached himself to the left "pinkie" toe of one of Long Beach's bathing beauties. Or suppose he had buried himself into the scorching sand of a New York dry goods man out for a day's swimming.

Or suppose he'd gone down to Rockaway and adhered to the foot of a stout matron from the Bronx. Or had pressed himself lovingly against the quivering sides of a Flatfish caper.

Or suppose he'd slipped into Coney Island and got himself mixed up with a picnic party. Or had wandered unthinkingly into a young man from Brownsville teaching a young lady from Canarsie how to swim.

Suppose any of these things, and then be glad he was caught. The good ship Rita, percentage unknown, brought him into Sheepshead bay late at night. The crustacean, you see we knew what he was all the time—was alive then, but he's dead since. Anyway, he's on exhibition at an Emmons avenue shop, and if you don't believe there is such a thing go see him.

He weighs, as we have said, 24 1/2 pounds. He was twenty years old when he passed away. He is 3 feet long. His beam, or width, is 48 inches. Wouldn't you hate to meet that lobster in the dark?

Aerial "Locomotives" May Be Used in Near Future

Berlin.—Aerial freight and passenger trains consisting of an aerial "locomotive" towing six or more aerial "cars" may become commonplace in the near future.

Successful experiments with trailers have already been made in Germany and plans are being laid for more extended tests in the near future. These will probably be conducted by Antonius Raab, the German pilot who recently set out from the aerodrome at Cassel trailing a passenger-carrying glider in his wake, and flew over Darmstadt, Karlsruhe and Frankfurt demonstrating the practicability of towing gliders. At Frankfurt the occupant of the glider loosened the towing catch, and, sailing down independently from the powered machine, made a perfect landing.

Since this test Aviator Ferdinand Schultze at Rosenthal made a new world's record in a motorless glider by remaining aloft 14 hours 8 minutes, a performance that, according to aviation experts, brings still nearer the day when people will be traveling about Europe and America in real aerial trains.

Fairy Flowers Are Fad Among Women in London

London.—Finding a fairy in flowers is the latest fad of the fashionable woman, and a most charming fad it is. At a West end restaurant a fair-haired woman in a leaf-green dress displayed an example of the new mode. On her right shoulder she wore a silken mauve orchid, but it wasn't an ordinary orchid at all. In the flower's center was a golden-haired fairy, and the stem was the fairy's slim green-clad limbs.

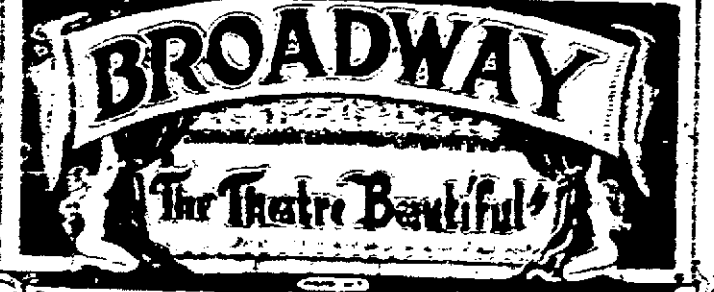

Another example of this fashion was displayed in a pink chiffon frock worn by an American girl at Covent Garden recently at the premiere of "Turandot." On either side of her swathed waistband was a flat flower of palest pink velvet; in the flower's centers were flat silken heads of fairy dolls with crisp curling golden hair resembling stamens.

Gold in Hens' Crops Leads to Mine Find

Montreal, Que.—An item from Charlottetown, P. E. I., announces a discovery of gold on the farm of Jack Matheson, a returned soldier. Extraction of pellets of pure gold from the crop of his poultry gave Matheson a clue to the presence of rich minerals on his place. He established that the poultry had been eating some of the deposit from an old well excavation and determined to dig in that vicinity. At a depth of some 28 feet he struck a rock formation similar to that which carried the gold found in the crops of his chickens, and since then he has himself dug up some nuggets.

Where Was Stars And Stripes First Flown in Battle?

Some of Old Glory's Baptism of Fire is Generally Regarded by Historians as One of the Mysteries of the Revolution.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—Where was the Stars and Stripes first flown in battle?

Historians would like very much to know the answer to that question, for, despite the claims advanced by various localities in New York and other states, the scene of Old Glory's baptism of fire is generally regarded as one of the mysteries of the Revolution.

Arguments have been brought forward to support each claim but no proof acceptable to the Division of Archives and History of the State Education Department has yet been proffered.

"Some new source of material," says Dr. Alexander C. Flick, state historian and chairman of the sequential celebration committee, "may be brought to light which will straighten out the confusion and vindicate the New York traditions. We have not exhausted the primary material by any means and a newspaper or diary, long hidden, may divulge the evidence we have been seeking."

The flag's military debut has been placed at Fort Stanwix—formerly Fort Stanwix, on the site of Home—at the battles of Oriskany, Saratoga, Bennington, Hubbardston, at Fort Ann, Portsmouth at Easton, Pa., and at Gooch's Bridge, near Wilmington, Del. Residents of Bound Brook, N. J., rise to remark that the first flag was flown over a fort near that town, while only one other day an old flag was found in an attic at Bridgehampton, Long Island, which was said to be "possibly" the oldest Stars and Stripes.

"The fact that the flag story is to be found in so many New York localities," says Dr. Flick, "suggests that it may have a basis in fact, but the best opinion seems to be that the location of the Stars and Stripes' first appearance under fire has not yet been determined."

"No documentary evidence has been produced to substantiate the tradition that the Stars and Stripes was used at all during the first two years of the Revolution. It is not impossible that some locality or military unit, in recognition of the new union, might have conceived the Stars and Stripes flag. But hitherto the only known examples of this flag are those preserved from the latter years of the Revolution."

The War Department recently announced that it had decided the issue in favor of Fort Schuyler, but a fortnight later it corrected this statement to read, "It was at this fort where there is credited to have occurred the first engagement under the flag of the Stars and Stripes design." However, the flag tradition is to be honored at the 150th anniversary celebration of the siege of the fort, to be held at Rome on Saturday of this week.

The claim for the old Mohawk valley fortress is based on contemporary records. William Colbraith, a soldier in the garrison during the siege, wrote in his diary under the date of August 3, 1777:

"Early this morning a Continental flag, made by the soldiers of Colonel Gansevoort's regiment, was hoisted and a cannon fired."

Colonel Marinus Willett, also a Fort Schuyler, wrote the following account of the incident:

"The fort had never been supplied with a flag. The importance of having one on the arrival of the Enemy set our ingenuity to work, and a respectable one was formed. The white stripes were cut out of Ammunition Shirts, the blue stripes out of the cloak formerly mentioned taken from the enemy at Peckskill. The red stripes out of different pieces of Stuff Collected from sundry persons. The flag was sufficiently large and a general Exhibition of Spirits appeared on beholding it, wave the Morning after the arrival of the enemy."

Captain Abraham Swarthout, on August 29, 1778, wrote to Gansevoort for "eight yards of broadcloth in lieu of my blue cloak which was used for colours at Fort Stanwix."

Historians have pointed out that none of these accounts mentions stars in the homemade flag, and it has therefore been contended that the banner was the Continental emblem, whose design was bars of red and white, with the crosses of St. Andrew and St. George on a blue field.

The Bennington flag, preserved by the Bennington Battle Monument and Historical Association, is said to have been carried at the battle of Bennington on August 16, 1777. This Stars and Stripes was handed down through the Fillmore family, its original owner being Nathaniel Fillmore, grandfather of President Millard Fillmore. In giving it to his nephew in 1812, Nathaniel Fillmore said the emblem had been used in the battle. Persons who contend that this flag is not the first powder-stained Old Glory say that there is no documentary evidence of its whereabouts between 1777 and 1812.

The latest supporter of the Oriskany tradition is Thomas A. Johnson of this city, whose great-grandfather, John Castleman, fought with Herkimer's men and passed on the story. The flag of this tale, however, had only eleven stripes.

The Fort Ann version, based on the diary of a British soldier, says that the flag was raised there on August 9, 1777. The diary entry in which mention of the banner is made was altered by an editor, authorities believe, to build up a good case for the Fort Ann tradition.

Neither the Hubbardston, Ticonderoga nor Saratoga versions have a stronger basis in known fact, and both bear a strong resemblance to the Fort Schuyler account. The Easton and Gooch's bridge claims have their supporters and the former place claimed a flag which is said to be the first Old Glory flown in battle.

The bridgehampton flag was uncovered among the personal effects of Captain John Hopton, an officer in the Continental army. It came to light in the attic of the former home of John L. Gardiner and was wrapped in a package marked "1775", which also contained letters and dispatches of Revolutionary soldiers. None of the documents mentions the flag, nor is there any other documentary proof of its authenticity.

The John Paul Jones tradition has it that that eminent commander hoisted the first Stars and Stripes at Portsmouth on July 14, 1777, displaying it from his ship Ranger. Credence is given in some quarters to the statement that Jones actually flew an emblem of that design, but it is hardly believed that he did so until his ship had put to sea on November 1 of that year.

Many students believe, in fact, that Old Glory was first used by the Navy. Support to this theory is given by the papers of Francis Hopkinson, which strongly indicate that Hopkinson, then chairman of the Navy Board, was the actual designer of the Stars and Stripes.

On May 25, 1780, he sent to the Board of Admiralty a statement of "sundry devices" and designs which he had drawn up three years before for various official seals and also for the flag of the United States of America. Requested to submit his itemized account, Hopkinson later presented a bill for his labors, where he refers to the banner as "the great naval flag of the United States." Hopkinson asked a remuneration of 540 pounds for his design.

Congress passed the flag resolution on June 14, 1777, but the banner was not given to the country until August of that year. The first known newspaper mention of it appeared in the Pennsylvania Evening Post of August 20, 1777. Although it is regarded possible that the approved design may have been known to the soldiers in the Mohawk and Hudson valleys, 150 years ago this summer, it is so far beyond impossible to prove, historians say, that the flag flown in the decisive battle of 1777 was not the Continental, or Cambridge, emblem.

West Shore Team Defeats P. O.-City

The P. O.-City team received a severe drubbing at the hands of the West Shore Railroad team Wednesday at the Athletic Field, score 16-3. The combination team used four pitchers against the Railroaders' attack, but they all looked alike to them. Sahloff was the hardest.

Bush was invincible on the mound for the Railroaders for six innings, keeping the Combination team hitless. He weakened a bit in the seventh and was touched for three runs and three runs. Bush also contributed three hits to the Railroaders' offense. Snyder was the longest hitter of the evening, pulling two doubles.

For four innings the game was nip and tuck, the score being 1-0, but in the fifth O'Neill started to weaken and the Railroaders made a merry-go-round of the contest. Sahloff relieved O'Neill and was pounded hard for the two innings he pitched. Davitt and Wheeler were the other pitchers for the P. O.-City.

Dempsey Will Be Ready to Fight

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 (AP).—Assured that his actress wife, Estelle Taylor, was recovering rapidly from an illness that kept her in bed for two weeks, Jack Dempsey today said he probably would be ready to leave for Chicago August 15 to start training for his fight there with Gene Tunney

September 22.

Dempsey said his wife was able to walk about for a few minutes yesterday.

Her physician, who described her illness as a condition bordering on a complete nervous collapse, announced

she "would be up and around in a few days."

The former champion said that he was in good shape for his come-back battle with Tunney, having kept in him since his victory over Jack Sharkey by light exercise in the gymnasium and road work.

RICKARD HAD PLANNED TO STAGE FIGHT IN CHICAGO

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Tex

Rickard let New York know today that he had planned to hold the

Gene Tunney-Jack Dempsey fight at Chicago ever since Dempsey lost his last year at Philadelphia.

The promoter related that Governor

Len Small, who was at the ring-side in Philadelphia, had told him the next heavyweight championship contest "must come to Chicago."

From then on, Rickard said, he intended to hold the bout in Chicago.

"I hope that this will be the last fight I will have to take out of

New York," said Rickard. "By this

Diamond Notes

Australia has 51 baseball teams under control of an association.

Baseball now is almost as much a part of the national life of Japan as it is of the United States.

This Helene Sand, who told about the prophecies of O'Connell and Corry Dolan, is a good workman.

Nick Altrock, baseball's jester, takes his golf very seriously and plays consistently in the low eighties.

"But let Joe" Bush, veteran big-league pitcher, was released unconditionally by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

William Cronch, of Memphis, Tenn., has been elected captain of the University of Kentucky baseball team for 1928.

San Antonio, Texas, is said to have more people playing baseball than any other city of its size in the United States.

Clarence Mitchell, Phillies, is one of the few remaining spitballers in the major leagues. He throws left-handed.

The only way some of us have tried to explain John Travener's famous home run is that he used a spring board for a bat.

John Barbee, a Harvard pitching ace, has won glory as a hurler. He has beaten the strong Holy Cross nine twice in a season.

Walter Johnson is one of the few prominent pitchers to accomplish the feat of striking out three pinch hitters in succession.

Ray Widdfield, Cleveland, has been elected captain of the 1928 Ohio State baseball team. Widdfield played first base on this year's Buckeye team.

Harry O'Boyle, Notre Dame football star, has been signed by the Des Moines Western League Baseball club for a tryout. He is an outfielder.

Eddie Farrell, shortstop of the Boston National League Baseball club, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a D.D.S. degree.

Lester Roupch, a young right-handed pitcher, has been obtained by Reading from the Chicago Cubs. He had been with the big league club all spring.

George Morridge, former pitcher of the Boston Braves and Washington Senators, has been named manager of the Rochester club of the International league.

"I doubt it," replied Rip Van Winkle when they told him he had been away that long. "It says here in yesterday's paper that Walter Johnson held the Red Sox to three hits."

Robert Quinn, head of the Boston Americans, has taken a step that may become a rule in the major leagues. Quinn refuses to sign any college student until after he has graduated.

New Orleans has a professor on its pitching staff and owner Heinemann hopes he knows his subject. The new man is Mac King, who comes from Tulane university, where he teaches biology.

Henry Fanning, former Texas league umpire, who is now calling 'em in the Pacific Coast league, is believed to be the only one-armed official in baseball, having lost his left arm in a boyhood accident.

According to records of a large insurance company, baseball is the most dangerous sport with accidents under the classification "in country or woods" following. Golf is third in hazards of sports.

Schenectady Cops Stop Colonials

The Schenectady Police team gained a victory over the Culliton

Robins outfit at Stamford Wednesday, mainly through the heavy hitting of Karis, Marone and McConvey. This trio was responsible for eight of the twelve hits allowed by

Dud Culliton. The losers were but able to connect for eight hits off

Mayhe. Art Smith smacked out three hits out of four trips to the plate.

Despite the fact that Mayhe allowed seven men to walk to first base and in every inning the Colonials had men on the bases, he was returned the winning pitcher, the final score being 6 to 4.

Facts Worth Knowing
The unique Prudence Guarantee was not an advertising afterthought for selling purposes—it was an investment forethought for safety purposes—the Guarantee and the Company came into being together—the Prudence Directors were not concerned as to whether or not a Guarantee would sell more PRUDENCE BONDS—they simply declined to sponsor one until a Bond without a Guarantee—for they knew that by pledging additional millions for public safety, they were thereby placing a high premium on investment conservatism.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Aug. 4 (P)—The recovery in stock prices, which set in soon after the drastic opening break yesterday, made further recovery today under the leadership of the industrial, more than a score of which were elevated to record high levels. Rails were inclined to heaviness, presumably on selling inspired by the $7,000,000 wage increase to eastern railroad engineers, although Chesapeake and Ohio common and the three Erie issues mounted to new high ground.

The market was confronted with a number of important developments. Wall street generally had been prepared for the adjournment of the Geneva Tripartite conference without reaching an agreement so that its market effect was negligible. Considerable uncertainty still existed, however, over the ultimate effect of President Coolidge's announcement, with many of the larger commission houses urging their customers to exercise extreme caution in the making of new commitments.

Credit conditions, widely regarded as the backbone of the current advance, continued favorable. Call money dropped from 4 to 3 1/2 percent and rumors of an early cut in the New York Federal Reserve discount rate were widely circulated, although there was considerable doubt that such action would be taken today.

Strength of the oils was believed to reflect the purchase of those securities by professional traders who had taken large profits in other groups of stocks and were willing to take a long position in the oils to await the expected improvement in the industry. Merchandising issues reflected steady growth and expansion of the leading chain store and mail order companies, new peak prices being registered by City Stores B. S. S. Kresge, McCrory Stores B. and Woolworth, all of which reached new high ground.

Among the many other issues through to new peak prices were Eureka Vacuum, Loose-Wiles Dye-Cut, Postum Cereal, American Express, Endicott and Union Carbide.

AUTO-TRACTOR LATEST IN TRANSPORTATION

The latest vehicle for army transportation is the convertible automobile-tractor, which was demonstrated by the British war office. The experimental car, a reconnaissance, has a lengthy chassis and between the front and rear wheels is a tractor which can be lowered or raised at will, depending upon the topography of the land.

MOTOR JAUNT IS ONE OF DELIGHT

Have Car Overhauled, Brakes Properly Adjusted and Tires Inspected.

Vacations remind me of our two weeks' motor trip to Estes park last summer, and I remember how we planned what to take and what to leave at home. It's a problem. Some tourists take dogs, canaries, even violas. But on a camping trip, you want to forget some marks of civilization, says Aunt Aggie of the Kansas State Agricultural State college.

Perhaps the experiences we had in selecting things to take will help some would-be campers.

Things to Get.

First, get a waterproof tent—try the hose on it before you leave home to be sure it won't leak. A wall tent, or one that goes over the car, is satisfactory. Steel stakes are better than wooden.

We took a steel spring auto bed, but although it was comfortable, it was too heavy to handle. A bed with woven rope bottom and wooden supports rather than steel is better for an auto bed. Take a folding cot apiece for the rest of the family. You'll need plenty of warm comfortable—newspapers help out because they are good insulators.

We took as few clothes as possible and packed them in some old suitcases—new bags would have been ruined on that trip. We were hiking clothes.

A short-handled spade helped us out of mud holes, and an ax was always useful. If you plan to fish, take your fishing tackle.

Cooking Utensils.
For meals, we had a small aluminum pan apiece, unbreakable cups, forks and spoons apiece, two or three case knives, a good butcher knife, a sirup pail for making coffee or heating water, a gallon pail for carrying water, salt and pepper shakers, skillet, and a large spoon for stirring.

We took along a home-cured ham and saved a number of meat bills.

One of the children kept a notebook of expenses, and immediately after we bought anything—gas, oil, food—she recorded the amount. It cost us just $150 for six of us to take the trip, and of course we have all our camp goods left to take another jaunt.

Our expense keeper also kept a diary of the trip in her notebook and, with our snapshots, we live over again our experiences.

Before leaving, have the car thoroughly overhauled, brakes adjusted, and a good set of tires put on, with a spare. A half-gallon can of oil is enough for emergencies. If you want to, take a trailer to pack things into, but one car is much easier to manage than two, even if the one is crowded.

Car Greatest Necessity for the Wife of Farmer

The American farm housewife can get along without a lot of things, but she must have her automobile.

Running water in the kitchen, a telephone and a radio are regarded as necessities, but the motor car ranks first.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has announced that it replies to 40,000 questionnaires sent to housewives living on farms disclosed that nearly four-fifths of them have automobiles, one-fifth radio sets, more than a third have running or pumped water at kitchen sinks.

Top of Steering Gear Post Repays Lubricant

It pays to keep in mind many of the less conspicuous parts of the car which are not properly lubricated because they are overlooked so easily.

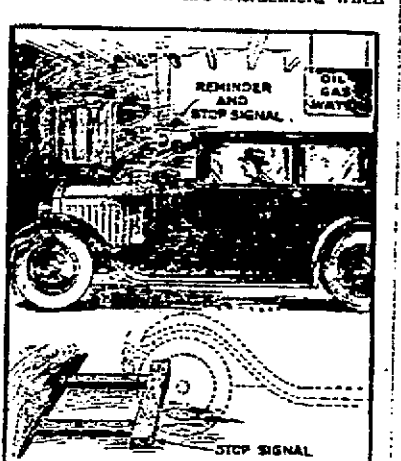

One of these, almost invariably forgotten in the lubricating process, is the top of the steering gear post. A few drops of light oil applied at this point every few thousand miles will take away the grinding noise when one tugs at the wheel as in parking.

Clutch and brake pedal shafts need a little lubricant once in a while. Neglect causes excessive wear, resulting in noisy pedal action.

Chain Stores
George R. Hartford, engaged in the shoe and leather business, added ten years to his life in 1926. Within a few years he had 25 shops in New York and Brooklyn, and in 1927, when he died, the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company was operating 3,222 stores.

Two Plans for Stopping Car in Right Position

The usual garage is just large enough to accommodate one, two or three cars, and the space in front of and behind the cars is rather limited. To prevent running the car into the garage too far, one owner suspended a card from the ceiling, so that it would just touch the windshield when the car was in the right position. Another method of preventing the car from going too far is to provide a removable wooden bumper on the floor as shown in the lower sketch.—G. A. Luers, Washington, D. C., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Australia Is Big Buyer of Heavy-Duty Trucks

Australia is the largest purchaser of American-made heavy-duty trucks, contrary to the public belief that Canada imports more of that type of vehicles than any other country. This is due, perhaps, to its nearness but the facts, do not bear it out.

Last year, according to the government figures, 617 trucks of more than two and a half tons capacity were imported from the United States by Australia. The agricultural development of the Antipodes is given as a reason, together with a lack of rail facilities.

As a matter of fact, truck experts believe, there never will be any extensive rail development in Australia, modern highways being built between the important cities which will afford ample transportation routes for the heavy trucks that also serve the rich farming districts that lie between.

Canada imported a little more than a third of the number of heavy-duty trucks that Australia did, the total for the neighboring country being 271.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

What the world needs now is an automobile that will carry its own parking place.

Automobile drivers are getting their brakes tested for nothing, but pedestrians are still paying to have their eyes tested.

Some of our ancestors left foot-prints on the sands of time, but you can't do much with a rubber tire on a concrete pavement.

A large proportion of "blowouts" of tires are due to rim cuts, and these are caused by not keeping rims free from rust and grit.

To start an engine when the ignition is locked and the key is lost, run a wire from the underground side of the horn to the ignition coil.

The average worker gets $2,000 a year, we read in a reliable journal. Of which, we would say, the average automobile dealer always gets some thing.

One person is struck by an automobile in this country every 42 seconds, a government statistic says. Once upon a time our national sport was baseball.

While a car may seem to ride better at 40 miles an hour than at 30 over a rough road, the higher speed sacrifices longevity and efficiency of axles, wheels, wheel bearings, differential, steering rods, brakes and other important parts below the springs.

Famous Grapevine

California's oldest grapevine was planted by Father Jeronimo Serra at San Gabriel mission in 1771 and is still flourishing. It is 8 feet in circumference and winds over a trellis that covers an acre. Its annual yield is a ton of grapes.

Widow Brands Telegram as Fake

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 3 (P)—Mrs. Sarah Bernardelli, widow of the man for whose death Sacco and Vanzetti have been condemned to die, today branded as spurious a telegram sent to Governor Fuller over her name last week urging clemency.

Mrs. Bernardelli said she did not write the telegram and did not send it, but that long ago she had been asked if she wanted to see innocent men put to death and had replied, "I do not want to see anyone punished who was innocent."

But as for Sacco and Vanzetti, Mrs. Bernardelli said she had never seen the men, had no information about them, and knew little about the case.

A large attendance of sorrowing relatives and friends attended with a profusion of beautiful flowers to the esteem in which the deceased was held. The services were very largely attended by her many relatives and friends and the floral tributes were many and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. The bearers were John Zech, Carl Lacher, John Hoffman, John Winter, Joseph Burger and Floyd Weiss. Interment was in the family plot in St. Peter's Cemetery where the committal services were conducted by the Rev. J. P. Neumann.

Gumaer sang "Pie Jesu" and at the conclusion of the Mass rendered "Ave Maria." The bearers were six grandsons of the deceased: John, Edward, James and William Leonard, John Cullum and John McFadden. The funeral was attended by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. A profusion of beautiful flowers also testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. Levine Accepts Drouhin's Terms

Paris, Aug. 4 (P)—Charles A. Levine, owner of the transatlantic plane Columbia, the newspapers said today, has formally accepted the terms of the provisional agreement under which Maurice Drouhin the French flier, was engaged to pilot the plane back to New York.

That section of the agreement over which trouble developed involved the deposit of 360,000 francs (about $12,000) by way of insurance for Drouhin's wife and family. Drouhin had already drawn up papers as the first step in an action to compel the American to carry out the terms of the tentative contract.

Wild Life at The County Fair.

Catskill Mountain Varmines Will Mingle Their Yells and Roars With Those of the Midway Barkers and Milk Will be the Official Beverage of Visitors.

Roberts, bears and other wild folk of the Catskills, all captured in Ulster county by an Ulster county man, will bowl, yell and do their tricks on the Midway of the Ulster County Fair, to be held at Ellenville, August 23, 24, 25 and 26.

F. D. Tyler, of Phoenixia, a duly accredited Catskill Mountain guide, captor of the animals, has already engaged space on the Midway for his wild folk. Of all the animals he will exhibit, only one, a panther, was not caught by himself.

A glance at Secretary-General Manager E. C. Horner's concession book for this year's fair indicates that the Midway, as well as the other attractions, will be more comprehensive than ever before. The old blanket wheels and the corn game will be there to satisfy the sporting spirit of the crowds. And there will be freak acts and two-minute thrillers galore.

Concessionaires evidently believe in the popularity of the well-known hot dog. In fact, from the number of hot dog stands already licensed for the fair it might be deduced that the slim but succulent Weiner and the plump frankfurter are fast becoming the most important items in our national diet. Placed end to end, the hot dogs ordered by county fair concessionaires undoubtedly would extend from Ellenville to the Dog Star, with enough left over to make a cake for any corner.

County fair visitors, with good, old-time heart, who would consider an armload of hot dog sandwiches a mere snack between meals, will be provided for, too. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Veterans' Memorial Hospital will have a large booth where more substantial food can be obtained.

The Ellenville Woman's Club will have a milk bar. A feature of the fair, it was learned today, will be the automobile exhibit. Newest models of many cars will be shown. Among the exhibitors will be the Vanderlyn Vanzanizing Company, who will show the Oakland and Pontiac; the Reo Corporation of Kingston, who will show Reo cars; Ladenheim's Garage, showing Chevrolet; Earl Hasbrouck, displaying Buicks and Oldsmobiles; Hoornbeek & Ackery, showing the Nash, and Homer C. Kuhlmann, Inc., displaying Paige cars.

GOOD WILL USED CARS

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

Radio reception Wednesday night was as clear perfect as possible and was really wonderful for the season. Afternoon and early evening were without a flaw and even though the buzzer began to buzz at 5:35 and continued the remainder of the evening, it could not bar out the stations, near and far. Even KDKA, which has the pip about 95 per cent of the time, was clear.

It was toothbrush, coffee and automobile tire night and the praises of these three necessities of life came in from every direction, but the musical programs were good. From WMCA and WARS came descriptions of a prize fight. All Boston stations were wonderfully clear. Detroit was heard from both WCM and WWJ, the three Cincinnati stations were heard. WTMJ was better than WJZ usually is. WSM of Nashville was almost up to its best and WJAX at Jacksonville, Florida, was very clear and strong.

Chicago stations were as they used to be before the air got filled with interferences. WLS, WMAQ, WEBB, WHIT, WBBM and WCFL were all worth listening to.

The annoyance of the evening was the way WGY sputtered, faded, gasped, squealed and generally misbehaved for about 15 minutes right after 9 o'clock.

But "there haint no radio in summer," says the pessimistic dealer in radio sets.

No Substitute for Salt

Next to iron the substance most valuable to man is probably salt. Apart from its use as a condiment, salt is essential for preserving foods, and as an antiseptic. Salt, being found even in the blood, seems essential to the health and well-being of man, and without it the human race would probably perish.

Catfish Poisonous
